Advanced Training at the International Congress “Person-Centered Health and the Resilient Adolescent”

In the lead-up to the International Congress Person-Centered Health and the Resilient Adolescent, scheduled for October 24–26, 2025, the Ambrosiana University and the International Academy of Person-Centered Medicine are proud to announce two high-level pre-congress courses designed for physicians, university faculty, researchers, and health professionals:

The course was organized to support the transition in medical education and clinical practice toward the paradigm shift in medical science and healthcare: Person-Centered Medicine.

1. Course in Person-Centered Medicine and the Person-Centered Clinical Method

□ October 20–23, 2025

Advanced Training in Person-Centered Medicine and Medical Education

This intensive course introduces the epistemological, clinical, and communicative foundations of Person-Centered Medicine, with a focus on personalized clinical reasoning, doctor-patient relationship, and person-centered clinical method. The course is part of the International Master's Program in Person-Centered Medicine

2. Course "Getting Published in Medical Education"

□ October 22-23, 2025

A unique opportunity for young researchers and educators to gain practical tools for publishing in the field of medical education. Led by international experts, the course covers manuscript preparation, peer review navigation, and submission strategies for high-impact journals.

Both courses precede the Congress, which will host young researchers under 35 from around the world competing for the title of Olympic Champion of Science 2025, as part of the Science Olympics World initiative.

Participants enrolled in the pre-congress courses will be automatically registered for the Congress free of charge.
